STATUTES

The Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing Act of 2003
15 U.S.C. § 7701 .....	3
15 U.S.C. § 7702 .....	3

1     I.     Introduction

2           As part of a widespread campaign to market their bogus diet pills,
3 Defendants have paid more than $17 million to affiliate marketers who have lured
4 consumers to Defendants' diet pill websites by plainly illegal means. Those 5 marketers have bombarded consumers with illegal spam emails and have used
6 "fake news" websites that include blatantly false weight loss claims and phony
7 celebrity endorsements, all to trick consumers into buying Defendants' pills.

10          Defendants concede as much. In opposing the entry of a preliminary 11 injunction, Defendants never suggest that consumers who take Defendants' pills
12 can actually lose 17 pounds in 4 weeks, as represented on the fake news websites.
13 They also produce no evidence that celebrities like Oprah Winfrey really have 14 endorsed their products. And Defendants do not even try to claim that the spam 15 email that lured consumers to their websites is in any way legal. The spam was 16 clearly illegal, and Defendants profited from it.
17
19

20          What Defendants boldly claim instead is that they simply are not responsible 21 for the illegal spam emails and false marketing claims because they purportedly
22 had no knowledge of them. Defendants claim is wrong, both legally and factually.
23

24          First, as a purely legal matter, Defendants are responsible for the illegal 25 conduct of the agents they hired to market their diet pills regardless of whether 26 they knew about that conduct or its illegality. When those agents proceeded to 27
28

1 engage in blatantly illegal conduct (a fact not contested by Defendants),
2 Defendants cannot escape liability by claiming, incredibly, that they had no idea
3 that it was occurring. Defendants profited from the illegal conduct and are 4 responsible for it.

6 But significantly, Defendants also are wrong on the facts. It is clear from 7 the evidence already submitted to the Court in connection with the entry of the 8 temporary restraining order, and from the supplemental evidence submitted here,
9 that Defendants knew of the illegal spam emails and false marketing claims.
10 Indeed, Defendants cannot credibly claim that they did not know of the false
11 claims on the fake news websites when they created and used their own fake news
12 websites that made identical false claims.
13
15

16 This Court previously found that the Federal Trade Commission ("FTC") is 17 likely to prevail on the merits of its claims that the Defendants are liable for the 18 alleged conduct, and that a freeze of their assets was warranted. Nothing about 19 Defendants' sparse filing undermines those findings. Accordingly, the Court
20 should enter a preliminary injunction, including an asset freeze, against all 21 Defendants.

24 II. Defendants Are Responsible for the Illegal Business Practices

25 Defendants are liable for spam sent by their agents under the CAN-SPAM
26
27
28

1 Act<sup>1</sup> and for their affiliates' deceptive claims in violation of the FTC Act. As 2 noted, Defendants are responsible for this misconduct regardless of whether they
 3 knew of it or not, but contrary to the self-serving claims in Defendants' response,
 4 the overwhelming evidence conclusively demonstrates that Defendants were aware
 5 of their affiliates' law violations. Finally, Defendant Vahe Haroutounian was 6 heavily involved in Defendants' deceptive marketing operation and so is 7 individually liable for its misconduct.

10 A. Defendants are liable for the illegal spam.

11 The CAN-SPAM Act imposes liability both on the spammers who transmit
 12 the offending spam email and on those who "procure" that transmission. 15 U.S.C.
 13 § 7702(9). To "procure" means to "intentionally pay or provide other 14 consideration to, or induce, another person to initiate" a message on one's behalf.
 15 Id. § 7702(12); see also FTC v. Phoenix Avatar, LLC, No. 04-cv-2897, 2004 WL
 16 1746698, at *13 (N.D. Ill. July 30, 2004) ("Liability [under the CAN-SPAM Act]
 17 ... also extends to those who 'procure the origination' of offending spam.").

18
 19 Defendants admit that they paid the affiliate network, Guru Media, that in 20 turn hired the spammer to send the email spam. Defendants also do not dispute
 21 that such spam led, through the deceptive fake news websites, to Defendants' own 22 websites, where Defendants sold their diet pills. Indeed, as previously explained in 23
 24
 25
 26

27 <sup>1</sup> The Controlling the Assault of Non-Solicited Pornography and Marketing 28 Act of 2003, 15 U.S.C. § 7701, et seq.

1 the FTC's TRO brief,<sup>2</sup> Defendants' own tracking records indicate that they paid
 2 the affiliate that sent the spam emails more than $10 million in commissions.<sup>3</sup> By 3 intentionally paying for the transmission of the spam that led to their websites,
 4 Defendants "procured" the transmission of that spam under the CAN-SPAM Act.
 5 Phoenix Avatar, 2004 WL 1746698, at *13 (finding it "quite likely" that 6 defendants procured and therefore "initiated the transmission of the spam
 7 advertising the Web sites" where defendants sold their diet patches.)

10 Moreover, the record in this case is replete with evidence that Defendants 11 willingly paid for emails, and in fact knew of the illegal spam they procured.<sup>4</sup> The 12 Defendants paid so much money for so long—more than $10 million paid over 13 more than one year—that their belated claims of ignorance of the illegal spam 14 simply are not credible.

 26 sent subject spam email). PX1 through PX7 are located in the Declarations in

 28 Temporary Restraining Order with Asset Freeze, Appointment of a Receiver,

<sup>4</sup> See United States v. Impulse Media Group, Inc., No. CV05-1285RSL, 2007
 WL 1725560, at *3 (W.D. Wash. June 8, 2007).

1 To have been blind to the spam sent on their behalf, as they claim,
 2 Defendants would have needed to ask absolutely no questions about the millions of 3 dollars they spent. Defendants also would have known less about their own 4 business than:

- 6 • a Yahoo investigator who visited Defendants' websites from the 7 illegal spam several times beginning in June 2014;<sup>5</sup>
 8
- 9 • FTC investigators who clicked on the links in the spam to Defendants'
 10 websites several times between September 2014 and February 2015, 11 even purchasing Defendants' bogus diet products;<sup>6</sup> and 12
- 13 • a consumer who was deceived by the illegal spam into purchasing 14 Defendants' products in October 2014 and who, once he realized he 15 was deceived, complained to Defendants' customer service number.<sup>7</sup> 16

17 In fact, Defendants routinely handled—but did nothing about—complaints
 18 of spam being sent from compromised accounts that led to their websites. Training
 19 materials found on Defendants' business premises indicate that as early as June
 20 2014, Defendants trained their employees on an issue labeled "Spam Email
 21
 22
 23
 24

26 <sup>5</sup> Declaration of H. Jacqueline Brehmer ("Brehmer Dec."), PX 3, at 23-24, 27 ¶¶ 11-12.

28 <sup>6</sup> McKenney Dec., PX 7, at 128-37, ¶¶ 11-34.

1 Response.”<sup>8</sup> This training included a script entitled “SPAM EMAIL RESPONSE”
2 that was found in the work stations in Defendants’ call center. The script
3 instructed call center agents to respond to consumer complaints about the spam
4 emails by stating:

- 6 • “We assure you that we do not have any type of access whatsoever to 7 your email system;” and 8
- 9 • “Can I have your email address and any other email address that was 10 compromised, please?”<sup>9</sup>
11

12 Thus, despite Defendants’ claim in their brief to have learned of the spam
13 emails only in March 2015, this script clearly shows that Defendants not only were 14 aware of the spam emails being sent on their behalf as early as June 2014, but also 15 that they were specifically aware that the emails were being sent from hacked 16 accounts.
17
18

19 Defendants’ knowledge of the spam emails is also demonstrated by the fact 20 that they tracked commissions related to those emails separately from other 21 affiliate commissions. In their brief, Defendants admit that the spam was sent by
23

26 <sup>8</sup> Declaration of Joseph F. Einikis III (“Einikis Dec.”), PX 8, at 6 (Att. A)
27 (showing employee “Retraining Checklist” dated June 11, 2014 with the item, 28 “Spam Email Response”).

1 an affiliate that they retained through an affiliate network called Guru Media.<sup>10</sup> In 2 their tracking account, Defendants identify Guru Media as an affiliate network that 3 they have paid more than $5.4 million. That $5.4 million does not include the 4 commissions that Defendants paid to the email spammer. Those commissions
5 were tracked separately, not as regular traffic originating through Guru.

8 To track the email spam commissions, Defendants created a new affiliate in 9 their tracking account, under the pseudonym “Winner Master,”<sup>11</sup> that purportedly
10 was separate from Guru Media. Defendants classified “Winner Master” as an 11 “email” affiliate,<sup>12</sup> and they paid “Winner Master” more than $10 million over 12 more than one year for the spam on top of the $5.4 million they paid to Guru
13 Media.

15
16 Guru Media and “Winner Master” likely are one and the same. Guru
17 Media’s invoices to Defendants included both the spam email commissions and 18 other commissions, and the spam email commissions were labeled on the invoices
19 with the identical pseudonym “Winner.”<sup>13</sup> The only explanation for these dual 20 accounts—one for non-spamming traffic from Guru Media, the other for the illegal
21 spam—is that Defendants were feebly trying to hide their own and Guru Media’s

1 involvement in the spam. But they only would have done that if they knew of the 2 spam emails, which they clearly did.

3 B. Defendants are liable for the false weight-loss claims and phony
4 endorsements on their and their affiliates' fake news websites.

5 As with the spam sent on their behalf, Defendants did not need to know that 6 their affiliates were marketing through fake news websites to be responsible for the 7 deceptive claims made on those websites. Defendants' affiliates are their agents, 8 and Defendants do not argue to the contrary in their brief. As such, Defendants are 9 responsible for their deceptive acts or practices in violation of the FTC Act. See 10 FTC v. Stefanchik, 559 F.3d 924, 930 (9th Cir. 2009) (citing Sw. Sunsites, Inc. v.
11 FTC, 785 F.2d 1431, 1438 (9th Cir. 1986)); Standard Distributors, Inc. v. FTC, 12 211 F.2d 7, 13 (2nd Cir. 1954) (defendant liable despite unsuccessful efforts to 13 prevent agents' misrepresentations). "[T]he principal is bound by the acts of the 14 salesperson he chooses to employ, if within the actual or apparent scope of his 15 authority, even when unauthorized." Goodman v. FTC, 244 F.2d 584, 592 (9th
16 Cir. 1957). Defendants chose to employ their affiliates, and cannot avoid liability
17 by claiming they did not monitor or know of those affiliates' deceptive claims.
18
20
21
22

23 Moreover, Defendants clearly did know that their affiliates were making 24 false claims on the fake news websites. Defendants fail to mention in their 25
26
27
28

1 response that they also maintained their own deceptive fake news websites,<sup>14</sup> which
2 were identical to those being used by their spammer and other affiliates.<sup>15</sup>

3 Defendants' contention in their response that they were ignorant of the false
4 marketing claims simply is not plausible when those claims appeared on 5 Defendants' own fake news websites, as well as the fake news websites of affiliate
6 marketers to whom Defendants paid $17 million.<sup>16</sup> Defendants' tracking platform
7 showed them every website from which their affiliates lured consumers to 8 Defendants' websites, including every fake news website used by those affiliates.<sup>17</sup>
9 Defendants were able to and likely did review those websites, since the content 10 was identical to their own fake news websites.

18 202 (Att. E) (showing fake news websites operated by Defendants leading to 19 Defendants' diet-pill websites); see also id. at 146, ¶ 56, at 146-47, ¶ 60, at 148, ¶
20 65, & at 150-51, ¶ 71(a) (showing Defendants' fake news websites were registered 21 from Defendants' place of business).

23 Defendants) with id. 178-82 (Att. C) showing fake news websites operated by

25 <sup>16</sup> As discussed in the FTC's TRO brief, this $17 million figure includes both 26 (1) more than $10 million paid for spam that led to fake news websites and on to 27 Defendants' diet-pill websites and also (2) more than $7 million paid to 28 Defendants' affiliate Talisman Media, LLC, which likewise marketed through fake news websites. Id. at 128, ¶ 9, at 157, Att. A, at 144, ¶ 50, & at 148, ¶ 64.
Defendants do not deny that they are responsible for Talisman Media's deceptive affiliate marketing.

<sup>17</sup> Id. at 142-44, ¶ 49 (showing fake news websites leading consumers to purchase several of Defendants' products).

1           C. Defendant Vahe Haroutounian was intimately involved in 2           Defendants' deceptive affiliate marketing activities.

3           Defendants' contention that Defendant Vahe Haroutounian only "completed
 4 the online order form" for Defendants' tracking services is wrong on the facts, and 5 their contention that he is not liable for the illegal conduct because he is "not an 6 owner, officer, director or employee of the Defendants businesses" is wrong on the 7 law.<sup>18</sup> In reality, Haroutounian was critically involved in Defendants' business,
 8 and his individual participation in and authority to control the illegal conduct 9 renders him liable for it. Stefanchik, 559 F.3d at 931.
 10

11           First, Defendant Haroutounian was present at Defendants' business location 12 when the receiver assumed control of the business, and he maintained a regular 13 desk one door down from defendant Artur Babayan.<sup>19</sup> Haroutounian also signed
 14 contracts for Defendants' marketing services,<sup>20</sup> received invoices from affiliate
 15 marketers addressed to defendant Sale Slash, LLC,<sup>21</sup> and corresponded by email
 16 with the company that maintained Defendants' tracking software.<sup>22</sup> He used his 17 home Internet connection to access that tracking software on nearly 300 occasions.

8 III. The Scope of the Proposed Preliminary Injunction is Appropriate<sup>25</sup>

9 A. The FTC Is Likely to Succeed on the Merits

10 As the Court found in entering the TRO against the Defendants, the FTC is 11 likely to prevail on the merits in this case. A preliminary injunction is warranted 12 where the FTC has demonstrated that (1) it is likely to succeed on the merits, and 13 (2) a balancing of the equities favors the entry of the injunction. See FTC v.
 14 Affordable Media, LLC, 179 F.3d 1228, 1233 (9th Cir. 1999) (citing FTC v.
 15 Warner Commc’ns, Inc., 742 F.2d 1156, 1160 (9th Cir. 1984)).<sup>26</sup>

21 <sup>23</sup> Id. at 140-41, ¶ 44, at 145-46, ¶¶ 55 & 59, and at 148-49, ¶ 66.

22 <sup>24</sup> Einikis Dec, PX 8, at 11-14 (Att. A).

23 <sup>25</sup> The FTC will submit a proposed Preliminary Injunction on May 8, in 24 advance of the May 11 hearing.

25 <sup>26</sup> In their brief, Defendants cite the standard for the entry of preliminary 26 injunction between private parties. As Defendants belatedly acknowledge in a 27 footnote, this private-party standard does not apply to FTC Act cases. Defs. Resp., 28 at 5 & n.1.

Defendants do not argue that the balancing of the equities favors rejection of the preliminary injunction and so have waived that argument, leaving only the question of whether the FTC is likely to succeed on the merits.

1 The FTC is likely to succeed in showing that Defendants are responsible for 2 conduct that the FTC has shown, and that Defendants concede, is illegal. As noted
3 above, Defendants have raised no argument that any of the charged conduct—the 4 false weight-loss claims, the phony celebrity endorsements, or the blatantly illegal
5 spam—is legal. The FTC has submitted evidence to show the illegality of each of 6 these practices: an expert declaration that the weight-loss claims are false,<sup>27</sup>
7 declarations from representatives of Oprah Winfrey and “The Doctors” television
8 show that those celebrities images were falsely used in Defendants’ marketing
9 materials,<sup>28</sup> and consumer declarations and other evidence that Defendants’ spam
10 violates the CAN-SPAM Act in several ways.<sup>29</sup>
11

15 As further explained above, Defendants are principals liable for the 16 deceptive acts of their agents and are liable for the offending spam because they 17 procured it. The CAN-SPAM Act and FTC Act do not require that Defendants
18 know of the illegal conduct to be liable for it, although Defendants clearly did 19 know. Defendants’ knowledge is shown by evidence of their deliberate, careful 20 planning—setting up anonymous tracking accounts, registering websites with 21 falsified information, and training their employees to deny any involvement in the 22 spam—that would defer and avoid the day of reckoning.

B. The Scope of the Asset Freeze is Appropriate

In their brief, Defendants do not argue that the FTC failed to prove that Defendants were likely to dissipate assets or that the Court should not have entered an asset freeze as part of the TRO.<sup>30</sup> The FTC provided such proof in its TRO memo, noting that Defendants had used falsified website registration information, mailboxes that did not relate to their actual place of business, and anonymous email sent from hacked accounts to mask their identity from consumers.<sup>31</sup> Defendants likewise do not contest the imposition of an asset freeze against Defendants Sale Slash, LLC, Purists Choice LLC, or Artur Babayan. Instead, Defendants argue that the asset freeze should not apply to (1) Defendants' future, unrelated income; (2) Defendants' pre-TRO income earned in other lines of work; and (3) the assets of Defendant Haroutounian.

1. The Preliminary Injunction should freeze future income or should not allow for living expenses.

Courts in this District and elsewhere have routinely entered temporary and preliminary injunctive orders that freeze defendants' assets, both present and after-acquired.<sup>32</sup> Orders freezing defendants' future assets—like the TRO entered in

1 this case—typically allow for the release from the frozen assets of living expenses
2 to defendants.<sup>33</sup> Orders that do not apply to defendants’ future, unrelated income
3 typically do not allow for the release of living expenses. Indeed, three orders cited
4 by Defendants allowed for the defendants in those cases to keep future, unrelated 5 income but did not separately allow for the release of living expenses from the 6 frozen assets.<sup>34</sup>

9 The FTC would agree to the exclusion from the asset freeze of future,
10 unrelated income. Indeed, after the filing of Defendants’ brief, FTC counsel
11 proposed such an exclusion to defense counsel as part of a proposed Stipulated
12 Preliminary Injunction. However, the FTC would not agree to a wholesale release 13 of future, unrelated income and to the release of living expenses, as those two 14 releases would be duplicative. Nor should the Court order such duplicative relief,
15 as Defendants could easily dissipate what assets are available for consumer 16 restitution.

22 <sup>33</sup> In the TRO, the Court conditioned the release of living expenses on 23 Defendants’ completion of financial statements disclosing their assets. Defendants 24 have not completed those statements, but are scheduled to do so by Friday, May 8.
25 As a result, Defendants have not asked for and the FTC has not agreed to the 26 release of any living expenses.

1                   2. The Preliminary Injunction should apply to all of 2                   Defendants' assets acquired before the entry of the TRO.

3                   Defendants urge this Court to exclude from the asset freeze "assets that pre-
4                   date the TRO, but which were generated from unrelated businesses." (Defs. Resp.
5                   at 10.) Defendants provide no explanation of these purportedly "unrelated
6                   businesses" and also cite no authority to support the exclusion of such assets.
7                   Defendants are mistaken: the FTC is seeking full restitution for all money lost by 8                   consumers to Defendants' deceptive and illegal scheme. Restitution or 9                   disgorgement in an enforcement action by a public agency is not limited to 10                  particular assets obtained by defendants from their unlawful activity, but rather 11                  includes all of the defendants' assets, up to the amount of their potential liability.
12                  As the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit has stated, "disgorgement 13                  does not require the district court to apply equitable tracing rules to identify 14                  specific funds in the defendant's possession that are subject to return. . . . [W]hen a 15                  public entity seeks disgorgement it does not claim any entitlement to particular 16                  property; it seeks only to 'deter violations of the . . . laws by depriving violators of 17                  their ill-gotten gains.'" FTC v. Bronson Partners, LLC, 654 F.3d 359, 373 (2d Cir.
18                  2011) (quoting SEC v. Fischbach Corp., 133 F.3d 170, 175 (2d Cir. 1997)). The 19                  Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit explained why public agencies are not 20                  subject to a tracing requirement:
21                  22                  23                  24                  25                  26                  27                  28

1 [T]he requirement of a causal relationship between a wrongful act
2 and the property to be disgorged does not imply that a court may order
3 the malefactor to disgorge only the actual property obtained by means
4 of his wrongful act. Rather, the causal connection required is between 5 the amount by which the defendant was unjustly enriched and the 6 amount he can be required to disgorge. To hold . . . that a court may 7 order a defendant to disgorge only the actual assets unjustly received
8 would lead to absurd results. Under [such an] approach, for example, 9 a defendant who was careful to spend all the proceeds of his 10 fraudulent scheme, while husbanding his other assets, would be 11 immune from an order of disgorgement. [This] would be a monstrous
12 doctrine for it would perpetuate rather than correct an inequity.

13 SEC v. Banner Fund Int'l, 211 F.3d 602, 617 (D.C. Cir. 2000).

14 As the Banner Fund court recognized, Defendants' liability extends not just 15 to those remaining assets that are specifically traceable to their misconduct, but 16 rather "to . . . a sum equal to the amount wrongfully obtained." Id. Applying this 17 principle, courts have rejected traceability arguments as the basis for releasing
18 funds from an asset freeze at preliminary stages like this one. See, e.g., SEC v.
19 Current Fin. Servs., 62 F. Supp. 2d 66, 69 (D.D.C. 1999) (declining to release 20 frozen assets for payment of attorneys' fees and finding it "irrelevant that funds are 21 not traceable" to wrongdoing); see also SEC v. Grossman, 887 F. Supp. 649, 661
22 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) ("[I]t is irrelevant whether the funds affected by the Asset Freeze 23 are traceable to the illegal activity."), aff'd, 101 F.3d 109 (2d Cir. 1996).

24 Based on uniform authority that asset freezes requested by public agencies
25 like the FTC are not subject to tracing requirements, this Court should not exclude 26 from the asset freeze anything made by Defendants before the entry of the TRO.
27
28

1                   3. The asset freeze should apply to Defendant Vahe
2                   Haroutounian.

3           Defendants urge this Court to lift the asset freeze on Defendant
4 Haroutounian for the same reason they urge that he should not be subject to a 5 preliminary injunction—his purported lack of involvement in the charged
6 practices. As described in Section II.C above, Defendant Haroutounian
7 individually participated in and had the authority to control the charged practices.
8 He worked at Defendants' premises, playing a central role in Defendants' affiliate
9 marketing enterprise, and should not be excluded from the preliminary injunction
10 generally or the asset freeze specifically just because he was not listed as an officer
11 or owner of the corporate defendants.<sup>35</sup>

19 <sup>35</sup> Defendants also ask the Court, if it is inclined to grant a preliminary 20 injunction against them, for more time for supplemental briefing. Defs. Resp. at 8-
21 9. Defendants' filing does not provide any explanation of the issues or evidence
22 that would be addressed in the requested supplemental briefing. Defense counsel 23 claims that they have not had sufficient time to review the FTC's materials, but 24 they have full access to Defendants, who presumably can adequately brief their 25 attorneys on their business practices. Moreover, the Court entered a temporary 26 restraining order against Defendants with a fourteen-day duration, the maximum 27 period allowed by the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(2).
28 Defendants should not be afforded two bites at the apple, particularly given the clear-cut nature of the issues and Defendants' failure to raise any issue that would benefit from supplemental briefing. As a result, the Court should not continue the preliminary injunction hearing and should not allow supplemental briefing, particularly of the unspecified nature requested by Defendants.

1 IV. Conclusion

2 In entering the TRO in this matter, this Court already found that the FTC is 3 likely to succeed on the merits of its claims and that an asset freeze was necessary
4 and appropriate. The evidence submitted by the FTC here—that Defendants 5 clearly knew of the illegal spam sent on their behalf and continued to pay for and 6 profit from it—only reinforces those findings. This Court should enter a full 7 preliminary injunction against all Defendants, including an asset freeze.
